Lynchburg, Norfolk, and Richmond Win.

GREAT GAME AT HILL CITY

Billiard, Shoemaker Pitcher, Wins His Game by Timely Hit in Tenth Inning—Biggest Crowd in City's History at Norfolk—Danville Shut Out—9,000 Saw Richmond Win.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Lynchburg, Va., April 22.—Before 2,500 fans, 20 of whom were from Roanoke, Lynchburg began the season auspiciously in a ten-inning game, which the Shoemakers won by the score of 3 to 1. The game was won by opportune hitting, after several chances were lost to win before the extra inning was played.
Roanoke played in mid-season form, some of its work being sensational. Billiard, who pitched for the locals, won his own game with a clean drive to center in the tenth. Score:
Lynchburg..... 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 1 5 2
Roanoke..... 0 0 0 0 0 1 0 0 0 1 4 0
Batteries—Billard and Rose; Doane and Smith. Umpire—Mr. Pender.

Norfolk, 9; Portsmouth, 4.
Special to The Washington Herald.
Norfolk, Va., April 22.—Before the biggest crowd that ever witnessed a season's opening game here, Norfolk won from Portsmouth, 9 to 4. Heavy hitting on the part of the locals coupled with wild pitching and costly errors, turned the tide of victory.
Oter, Norfolk's first pitcher, was driven from the box in the third inning and Savage went in. After that Portsmouth got not another run, but but two hits. The attendance was 6,000.
The game was called in the middle of the eighth on account of darkness, after two hours and ten minutes of play. Score:
R.H.E.
Portsmouth..... 0 1 0 0 0 0 4 5 2
Norfolk..... 1 0 3 1 2 1 2 3 0 1 3

SPORTING Sidelights
By BILL BAILEY.
The Boston Nationals failed to find the Pole yesterday, all right. Mr. Covaleski got sweet revenge.
What Western High's football team did to Central last fall is likely to be repeated on the same field to-day when the Business High crowd gets busy in the ball game with a little bit of music. Menace may have to be called upon to go into the box and stem the tide.

PARODY ON "MY DREAM OF THE U. S. A."
I saw Washington last night in my dream.
The last trip to the hat.
I saw Milan make that awful crash.
And we yelled till he took off his hat.
Then we cheered for our favorite, Walter Johnson.
As he struck them out one by one.
And I thought that I'd go crazy.
When Ungauba made a home run.

PORTSMOUTH SIGNS CATCHER.

Pat McCauley, of Eastern League Fame, Is Secured.
Special to The Washington Herald.
Portsmouth, Va., April 22.—Pat McCauley, the catcher who was the mainstay back of the plate for Jersey City when "Bill" Murray handled the reins of this Eastern League bunch, has been secured to catch for Portsmouth from the Jersey City club of the Eastern League. Last year McCauley caught for the Wilmington, Del., outland club, Floyd Clum, one of the star pitchers, of the Tri-State League last year, arrived at Portsmouth to-day. Clum and McCauley should prove a winning battery in the Virginia League. McCauley a few years ago caught for the Washington club. Major league managers have already offered to purchase Clum, who gives promise to be one of the best "southpaws" on the slab to-day.

AWAIT BUGLE CALL

Everything in Readiness for Pimlico To-morrow.

MORE THAN 700 ARE ENTERED

Old-time Bookies and Ten Additional Stalls Will Be Doing Business Without Fear of Interruption—Banner Spring Meet Is Promised Patrons of the Sport.

Special to The Washington Herald.
Baltimore, April 22.—Everything is in readiness for the spring meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club, which begins to-morrow at Pimlico. It is to be the best of any meeting ever pulled off here, and the beauty of it is that the racing enthusiasts are to enjoy the old-fashioned mode of betting without fear of being troubled by sharp-nosed sleuths from every hall, as is the case nowadays at city course near New York.
The ring will be occupied by old-time bookies who have done business here for the past ten years, so that there will be no trouble in getting a bet down. Ten more bookies will this year chalk up the prices than did a year ago, the management of the association believing that there will be several thousand more daily patrons.
The racing season usually begins at Washington a month earlier than at Baltimore meet, but was not held this year because of the sentiment among certain classes at the capital against the sport. As a result of Washington's loss, and the fact that racing will not begin in New York until the middle of next month, the officials of the Maryland Jockey Club have put forth every effort to make this a banner spring meeting. In diversity of interests and in class of horses that will start the spring meeting at Washington a month earlier than at Baltimore meet, but was not held this year because of the sentiment among certain classes at the capital against the sport.

Local weather experts state that to-morrow will be clear and warm, and although the course will be lumpy as a result of the recent rains, it will not be heavy enough to cause the better class of horses entered for opening day events to be checked.
More than 700 of America's best horses are here awaiting the bugle call. They have come from all parts of the United States and Canada to meet those of Maryland and Virginia in friendly rivalry. In diversity of interests and in class of horses that will start the spring meeting this year at Pimlico will be a success.

REPUBLICANS IN WAR OVER TARIFF

per cent on hides, which actually determined the matter. He said he voted to put the duty on hides at the suggestion of Senator Allison.

Consideration of the tariff bill was begun thirty minutes after the Senate met yesterday. Senator Scott presented a memorial from steel manufacturers of Wheeling protesting against the bill. Senator Bristow, of Kansas, inquired of Mr. Aldrich whether the Finance Committee had published any estimates of revenues based on the importations of 1906. Mr. Aldrich replied that there had been no published estimates. He suggested that the Senate bill would yield $25,000,000 less in revenues, based on the imports of 1906, than on the imports of 1907. Senator Overman asked why an estimate had not been made based on imports for years other than for 1907.

Bailey Takes a Hand.

Mr. Bailey suggested that an estimate based on 1907 imports came more nearly than the estimates due to a threatened deficit. Mr. Bailey declared that there was only one way open to explain away the apparent deficit under the bill, and the Senator from Rhode Island, with his usual cleverness, adopted it. A fair estimate, Mr. Bailey suggested, would have been based on the average of imports covering several years. Mr. Aldrich replied that the year 1907 was adopted because it was the last year of normal conditions.

Consideration of the bill had not proceeded far before a partisan discussion broke out. Fugate paragraphs were taken up, but only three of them were agreed to, the others being passed over. The last paragraph related to gas reports. The Senate committee had struck out the House bill specific duty of $3 each to 20 per cent, ad valorem. Senator McCumber explained that the increase amounted to 200 per cent. Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, took a whack at the Republicans by reading the report of the importations, showing that there were practically no importations of gas reports. He demanded to know why the committee saw fit to raise the duty to such an extent.

Senator Penrose admitted he had been responsible for the charges. He explained that the size of the gas reports had increased, which made it necessary to increase the duty. But Mr. Bailey insisted that in view of the fact that American manufacturers still controlled the market, as shown by the report of importations, the increase was on an entirely wrong basis, over 200 per cent, was not "revision downward," as the country had been promised. Senator Nelson took the same view.

Denies "Downward" Pledge.

Senator Aldrich denied that the Republicans had promised "revision downward." The Republican policy, he asserted, was to lay a duty that would measure the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, and to add for a reasonable profit.
"What portion of this proposed increase of over 200 per cent measures the difference between the cost of production and what measures the reasonable profit?" asked Mr. La Follette. Senator Aldrich read from the statement of the gas report manufacturers to show that the cost per ton was $5 on the foreign article, and $12 for the home-made report.

"Did the committee accept the word of manufacturers without seeking any corroboration from other sources?" persisted Mr. La Follette.
Mr. Aldrich replied that he was ready to take the word of any reputable American business man until he was shown to the contrary.

SEEK DUTY ON OIL

Independent Producers Crowd Room of Senate Committee.
The rooms of the Senate Committee on Finance were besieged yesterday by representatives of the independent oil producers, who told the members of the committee that unless a duty of 50 per cent was placed on crude petroleum and its products, the Standard Oil Company would control the business of production, as it now practically controls the business of refining.
A long memorial was submitted by N. V. Franchot, of Oilman, N. Y. He contended that independent producers represented at the hearing produced 80 per cent of all the crude oil produced in the United States, and the Standard Oil Company controlled 11 per cent of the production. He asked for a duty of 50 per cent on all oil, and the independent refiners only 10 per cent.

Says It Is to Curb Competition.

Replying to Senator Root, Mr. Bailey said he could see no reason for increasing the duty except to prevent serious and hurtful competition. Only fifty-five reports were imported last year, valued at $1,500, and on which the duty was $165; yet with the American market so completely protected, with no resources but greed of the manufacturers, the duty was advanced.
Senator Nelson, Republican, of Minnesota, made an attack on the Senate bill. He declared the rates on the four scheduled, glass, cotton, and woolen manufactures, were out of proportion to other rates in the bill, being in many cases over 50 per cent, and unduly high. He read from the report of importations to show that the duties were prohibitive and the manufacturers controlled the home market. He said he would ask at the proper time for a reduction of duties in all of the schedules named.

Senator Gallinger reminded him that the Wilson-Gorman bill reduced wool schedules and that laboring men suffered because of the reduction of duties on the woolen and cotton manufactures. He said the Wilson-Gorman bill was passed in 1904 and was caused by financial conditions and not by the Wilson-Gorman bill. He asked Mr. Gallinger why the New England manufacturers were so eager for high duty on wools to protect laboring men, did not ask for a duty on hides for the same purpose.

Aldrich and Bailey in Tilt.

During the discussion over the duty on carbon used in electric lights, the debate took a sectional turn. Senator Aldrich said he had been a protectionist ever since he cast his first ballot in 1864. He added that he had been a soldier in the Union army and had voted the Republican ticket ever since. Mr. Bailey, of Texas, the Democratic leader, under-stand Senator Aldrich to make the claim that no man who had served in the Union army could conscientiously vote the Democratic ticket after the civil war, and he rose to take issue with this statement.

"To say that Unionism and Republicanism are synonymous," Senator Bailey declared, "is to place a stigma upon the memory of the many Democrats who fought bravely in the Union army." Continuing, Senator Bailey said he thought Mr. Aldrich would regret having made such a remark when he read the stenographic report in the Record. Replying, Mr. Aldrich said he did not make such a statement, as it would have been a reflection upon many Democrats, some of whom were from his State, and had been killed in the civil war.

"I have always been a protectionist," Senator Aldrich continued, "and have always voted the Republican ticket since 1864, although my Democratic friends believe that the Republican principles were correct. As a Union soldier I could not conscientiously vote the Democratic ticket in 1864, on a platform which declared that the civil war had been a failure. Therefore I

THIS WAS THE MOTTO OF THE IMMORTAL LINCOLN, AND WE KNOW FROM HIS ILLUSTRIOUS LIFE THAT HE ACHIEVED THE HIGHEST OFFICE IN THE GIFT OF THE PEOPLE.

CONTESTANTS in The Washington Herald Contest should make the above alliterative phrase their motto. The result of your efforts will, at the termination of this great race, be such that you will never cease to be thankful toward yourself for having entered your name. It is not advisable to wait another day to do this, provided, of course, your name is not already in the list. Do to-day—not to-morrow. Yesterday is gone, and to-morrow may never come. Thus it will be seen that delays are dangerous, a sermon which has been preached to us from time immemorial. A small effort now may have a material bearing upon your future prosperity. Don't wait.
